

Android application competition

Continue

Hello Guys ! We have made an android application, Coding Schedule, that helps the users to track the ongoing and upcoming competitive coding competitions on Codeforces, Hackerrank, Hackerearth and Codechef. The application will show the list of all contests divided in three parts: Upcoming Short Contests (ending within a day) , Ongoing Contests and Upcoming Long Contests (time duration is greater than 24 hours). The links for contest, start time and date, end time and date (the time can be customized to your own timezone from the settings) is directly accessible from the icons and with an additional feature of adding a reminder for the contest. Also you have an option to hide the contests that you seem not worthy or for any reason. Please look into the app for checking out the other aspects of app and give us more suggestions to improve further. Here is the link of application available on google play store: CODING SCHEDULE Please check it out and rate us on the google play store. Thank YouThe team: brijeshpanara24 smit_detroja96 shreyansh08 Tarun miandungrani Pratik Rajani yatinpatel nisharg_patelthe post with update application feature is here. do check it out ! thanks ! International Conference on Distributed Computing and Networking (ICDCN) 2022 announces a competitive programme for developing interactive and ingenious mobile applications in one of the following two broad themes: Smart Cities and Internet of Things, including smart transportation, smart utilities, etc. COVID-19 management, including contact tracing, health reporting, logistics, etc. The primary motive is to recognize the innovative ideas that can leverage mobile technology, in conjunction with networking, computing and analytics, to have socially impactful solutions that take into account regional and social factors. The participants are free to incorporate any system architecture, including stand-alone, peer to peer, Cloud/mobile, client-server, etc. Participants can build their mobile application using any smartphone platform including, native Android and iOS, mobile web app, etc.. Participants should submit a proposal to the competition as described below. App proposals that are shortlisted will have the opportunity to make a brief presentation at the ICDCN 2022 conference. The conference will select one or more Apps for awards by a panel of judges, and the winning teams will be awarded a certificate and a cash prize. Submission Guidelines: Participants should submit (1) a two-page proposal in PDF format, (2) a link to a brief video 2- 5mins long uploaded to YouTube, (3) a link to an App Store, GitHub repository or website from where the app can be downloaded and evaluated, and (4) optionally a link to the source code for the lab and relevant services. If the application requires backend server support, the services must be working at the time of evaluation. The proposal should have the following details: Application Name: Concise name of the App and Proposal Title Affiliation(s): Author(s) name, institution, email address Description: The proposal should clearly describe: The problem being solved by the developed application Motivation for the problem, target audience and its social impact Technical details about the architecture and platform, justification of the soundness of the design Related work on similar technical approaches and other similar apps in the market, and the novelty of the proposed app and design Functionality enabled by the application, with a walk through of the application working to complement the video Link to the 2-5min YouTube video, installation link to the app, and optionally a link to the source code. Discussion of how the features of the app will solve the problem for your target audience The submission should be made using this EasyChair link before the given deadline. Proposals will be shortlisted by a program committee of experts for presentation at the conference, and their proposal will appear in the proceedings of the ICDCN conference. Rules and Eligibility: All developers of the app should be listed as authors in the proposal. An individual or a team of up to 4 members can submit the proposal in the competition. Authors can include mentors such as faculty or technical staff from industry. At least one of the authors must be an undergraduate or a graduate student from any recognised university at the time of submission. The submission must be unique and innovative and should hold sufficient difference from the existing apps in the market. The developed app must run on the real-world platform (only simulation of the proposed app is not allowed). The app should not violate any copyright laws, such as using unauthorized logos, images, videos, and so on, or contain any promotional or abusive contents. The app must not already be published on any online platform (like Google play store, Apple app store). The app or the proposal should not have appeared in any other previous competitions or refereed conferences. Proposals that are accepted will appear as part of the ICDCN conference proceedings. Authors will retain all rights to the app. The authors may optionally provide a link to the source code under an open source license. One of the authors of the shortlisted app proposal must register for ICDCN 2022 and present their work at the conference. Selection criteria: (To be declared soon) Important dates (tentative): Submission Deadline: September 30, 2021 Notification of Decision: October 15, 2021 Camera ready version of Proposal: October 19, 2021 Final Presentation at Conference: January 07, 2022 Submission site: Winners: (To be declared on January 07, 2022) Contact: For any query related associated with Mobile Apps Competition, feel free to contact: Hari Prabhat Gupta, Indian Institute of Technology (BHU) Varanasi (hariprabhat.cse@iitbhu.ac.in) Yogesh Simmhan, Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore (simmhan@iisc.ac.in) Please Wait Best viewed in latest versions of Mozilla, Chrome, Opera & Safari.
